I think . . . .
of the past.
. . . of the life . . . of a child
. . . Of walking these hallways a million times.
It is here that I was younger . . . .
It is here that I grew older . . . . .
These empty rooms house memories . . . . . of laughter and sorrow

of friends and of others
of love and hate of courage and of fear . . . .

. . . . . all here.
These walls around me and this roof above me . . . . .
. . . . . my security, my sanctum . . . . .
my life thus far.
Now I wonder . . . . .
Have I been sheltered . . . . . from reality?
That question I shall ask the world . . . . . tomorrow.
